Federalism.US is part of the National Academy of Public Administration's Center for Intergovernmental Partnerships. The National Academy of Public Administration is a congressionally chartered, independent, 501(c)(3) nonprofit, non-partisan organization. Since 1967, the Academy has provided expert advice to government leaders in building and managing more effective, efficient, equitable, accountable, and transparent organizations. As part of its Congressional charter, the Academy "shall, whenever called upon by Congress, or the Federal Government, investigate, examine, experiment, and report upon any subject of government."

The Standing Panel on Intergovernmental Systems

The Academy established the Standing Panel on Intergovernmental Systems to convene thought leaders around critical intergovernmental issues and produce thought leadership to advance the field of public administration. The Standing Panel on Intergovernmental Systems is uniquely positioned to advocate for the idea that "federalism and intergovernmental systems matter" and to provide an entry-point for public officials, citizens, and scholars into evidence-based policy discussions around intergovernmental systems and relations.
