

Nominations are now being accepted for the 2024 Award for

The Best Book in Public Budgeting and Finance

Nominations are due July 1, 2024

The Association for Budgeting & Financial Management solicits nominations for the Best Book Award. The Best Book Award shall be awarded to the best submission for an outstanding public budgeting and finance book or edited volume with a copyright date within the past three years (2021 or more recently). Award eligibility is limited to books with association members in good standing. The book should be targeted to an academic research audience, and not be a textbook or a practitioner workbook. Preference will be given to books rather than edited volumes. Nominations (including self) should include a brief letter of introduction highlighting the scholarly contribution of the book for the ABFM audience. Books previously nominated are automatically re-nominated by the committee if they remain eligible.

The nominations are due to Justin Ross (justross@indiana.edu) by July 1, 2024. Physical or electronic copies will be requested for individual members of the Award committee to assist in evaluation.
